III. WORKSHOP - Natural Resource Inventory, presented by Chet Arnold and Emily Wilson of the UConn Center for Land Use Education and Research (CLEAR).

A Natural Resource Inventory (NRI) can be a valuable tool for a community, providing an underpinning for the Plan of Conservation and Development, informing open space plans, and contributing to other town initiatives. This workshop will introduce the audience to the overall concept of an NRI, go over major categories of information that may be included, and identify where this information can be found using internet mapping resources. Live demonstrations will be given of Connecticut Conditions Online (CT ECO), the state's main repository of natural resources geospatial maps and data. Techniques for downloading and sharing maps will be reviewed.
